YEAH! WONDER WHERE EVERYBODY IS? THE---

WE FOUND EVERY TEAM EXCEPT --YE GODS! LOOK! THERE THEY ARE... AT THE FINISH LINE!

MINUTES LATER--

...AND THAT'S EXATLY WHAT HAPPENED, SIR, AND WE'RE SORRY THAT IT RUINED THE WHOLE RACE FOR YOU!

BUT IT DIDN'T! IT ONLY DELAYED IT! AFTER ALL, YOU'RE THE ONLY ONES WHO CROSSED THE FINISH LINE--SO YOU WIN!

BY GOSH, THEY DO! THE RULES DIDN'T SAY WHAT KIND OF DOGS THEY HAD TO USE, AND A WOLF IS A MEMBER OF THE DOG FAMILY!

AND SO...

I THINK IT WAS SUPER OF YOU TO CHOOSE ME AS YOUR QUEEN, JITTERBUCK, HONEY! WILL YOU BE IN THE RACE AGAIN NEXT YEAR AND CHOOSE ME AGAIN?

I DUNNO! IT ALL DEPENDS ON WHETHER WE CAN GET A WOLF TO PULL US!

YEAH! HEY, ZOOT! YOU WANT THE JOB NEXT YEAR? HAW!

THE END....

THE END....

JITTERBUCK JONES in "ONE GUY'S GAL!"

IT'S THIS DANCE which I've got to attend!" Jit said mournfully.

"What's so sad about that?" Cookie wanted to know. "You act like it's a Latin exam or somethin'!"

Jit looked reprovingly at Cookie before answering. "A dance can be a problem, too," he pointed out, "when it so happens that every doll in town is dated up or busy! I can't get a girl!" He allowed this to sink in awhile, noting the expression of sympathy on Cookie's face. "Listen, Cook, ol' pal, chum of my cradle days an' all that, you're not goin' to that dance!"

"I know it," Cookie replied, "so you're not givin' me any news!"

"What I mean, buddy, is would ya mind if Angelpuss...well, if I asked Angelpuss...I mean I know she's your girl, but just as a favor...I don't wanna go stag...an' it would be sorta friendly if..."

"Say no more!" Cookie held up his hand to stop Jit's stammering explanation. "I hereby grant you permission, providin' Angel is willin', to escort her to th' dance! But it's strictly a temporary loan!"

Though Jit knew it was strictly temporary, he couldn't help sprucing up a bit more carefully than usual. He brushed his hair, shined his shoes and removed invisible specks of lint from his dark blue suit. Never had he prepared so meticulously for a dance! "Not," he said to himself, "that I'd even think o' double-crossin' my best friend, but I'd just like to show Angel that there're a coupl'a other guys around...namely me!"

By the time Jit called for Angel, corsage in hand, he had resolved to be as charming and attractive as he could! "Hi, greetings and also compliments!" he bowed low before Angelpuss. "You couldn't be more gorgeous if you tried!"

Angel smiled politely, but there was a distant look in her eyes. Jit had the feeling that she was far, far away. Perhaps even thinking of...another!

All evening, Jit worked manfully to impress Angel. He danced his smoothest, fanciest tango, which he accompanied with a few gracious words in Spanish. Angel smiled, followed his fancy footwork, but continued to seem rather distant.

Now, this was becoming quite annoying to Jit. After all, he was a pretty slick guy in his own right! To prove it, he created a sensation by doing his hilarious imitations of Humphrey Bogart, Charles Boyer and Peter Lorre, and wound up on all fours in a terrific take-off on that great star of the screen, Lassie! Everyone applauded madly, and Angel too patted her palms together once or twice, but she spoiled the entire effect by smothering a yawn, shortly thereafter.

It was almost midnight and time to go home. As Jit escorted Angelpuss out into the street, they were joined by Cookie. "Have a nice time?" he asked, taking Angel's free arm.

"Oh, Cookie, I'm so glad to see you," Angel said. "The dance was very nice and Jit was swell, but I'm so glad to see you!"

The boys saw her home and then walked on together. Jit, who had been unusually quiet, suddenly said, "Nothin' personal, old chum, an' you know I think Angelpuss is a nice girl an' all that...but sometimes I wonder what you really see in her!"

Cookie smiled, remembering the way Angel's eyes had lit up when she saw him. "Do you really wonder?" he asked, grinning. "Well, I'm gonna be frank with you, old buddy! I don't!"

"A SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER!"

IN ALL HIS life, Cookie had never been so glad to wake up! That dream! He shuddered as he got into his clothes, remembering his nightmare. First of all, he had been walking through a park and everything was quiet and calm. And then, that man... Again Cookie shuddered, recalling the man in his dream.

"He sure was a villain, Jit!" Cookie was telling his dream to his pal as they walked to school together. "He didn't look so awful, sorta middle-aged with gray hair an' a bald spot an' maybe a little moustache, but he was a terror! The minute I saw him, I kinda froze up an' he marched up to me, lookin' like this!"

Here, Cookie narrowed his eyes into little slits and frowned cruelly to imitate the effect the man in his dream had had. "An' then he began to threaten me! Gosh, he was gonna catch me an' beat me up an' throw me to sharks an' everything! So I started runnin' an' he started after me, an' I ran for miles, but he kept gettin' closer an' closer! Then, just as he was about to catch me...I woke up! Whew!" Cookie mopped his brow as though he'd had a narrow escape.

"Aw, everybody knows dreams ain't real," Jit said. "Just forget it! Don't even think about it, that's all!"

Cookie managed to shake off the memory of his dream as the day went on, what with school and a couple of fast innings of baseball afterward. To make things even rosier, he had been invited to Angel's that night, for fruit punch and chocolate cookies.

By the time evening rolled around, Cookie was in good spirits again. He ran up the steps to Angel's house, two at a time, and knocked on the door. Angel greeted him, making him forget almost everything but how blue her eyes were and led him into the living room, chattering happily.

"Wait'll you taste the cookies, they're yummy!" she said. "I got a last-minute inspiration and put frosting all over them and...why, Cookie! What are you staring at? You look as though you're seeing a ghost!"

"It...it's him! I mean...he!" Cookie's face was white and his eyes glazed as he pointed a trembling finger at a gentleman who appeared to be in deep conversation with Mr. Witherspoon, Angel's dad.

"Oh, do you know Mr. Crownley?" Angel smiled. "He's some big business contact of dad's...a very important man!"

"He's a menace!" Cookie shuddered as he had that very morning. Yep, this guy was sorta middle-aged and had gray hair and a little bald spot! Maybe he wasn't a dead-ringer for the villain in his dream, but he sure was close! Close enough for Cookie to have goose-bumps all over as he confronted Mr. Crownley.

"Don't have anything to do with this man!" he warned Mr. Witherspoon. "I tell ya, he's...he's up to no good! He's terrible!"

Mr. Witherspoon turned red, a sure sign of anger. "If this is your idea of a joke, Cookie," he said grimly, "I want you to stop!"

"I'm not kiddin'!" Cookie looked earnest. "Why, I wouldn't trust this guy with..."

Mr. Witherspoon would not let him finish. Cookie found himself collared by Angel's father and forcibly directed to the door. Then he found himself outside the door, listening to Mr. Witherspoon's loud apologies to Mr. Crownley. "And as for you," Mr. Witherspoon shouted to his daughter, "I forbid you to see that O'Toole boy again! I don't think he should be allowed out by himself!"

Cookie had certainly started something!

Not only was Angel forbidden to speak to him, but his own father was sore as a boil after he'd heard the story from Mr. Witherspoon. And since Mr. Witherspoon was his father's boss, Cookie was in the doghouse, but 'way in!

"And the funny thing," he said forlornly, reporting his troubles to Jit, "is that I know I'm right about that Mr. Crownley, or whatever his name is! He's no good! I believe in what I dreamed, Jit, and I'm gonna get the goods on that guy an' prove he's a bad actor! Wanna help? We could be sort of private-eye guys an' follow him around..."

"Nothin' doin'!" Jit's voice had an air of finality. "Dreams don't mean a thing an' I'm not gettin' mixed up in any crazy stunt!"

This left Cookie on his own. Determined to prove to everyone that he'd been right about Mr. Crownley, he dogged that gentleman's footsteps with the devotion of a shadow. Wherever Mr. Crownley went, Cookie was sure to go, until Mr. Crownley thought he was losing his mind! Could it be that the entire town was populated with boys who looked exactly like Cookie O'Toole? He saw him in restaurants, hotel lobbies, office buildings, idling at street corners, and even in busses! This lad seemed to be everywhere at once!

But, although Cookie was everywhere, he had yet to see Mr. Crownley do one crooked or rotten thing, except maybe the time when he almost took another man's hat in a restaurant. But the mistake was found out in time, so Cookie couldn't be sure it was intentional on Mr. Crownley's part! One thing he did know, however, and that was that he would get the goods on Mr. Crownley eventually.

With this in mind, Cookie trailed Mr. Crownley to his hotel room late one night. Luckily for the private eye, Mr. Crownley had a room almost at street level, so Cookie, by raising himself on his toes, could peer in through the window. It was rather late at night, and Cookie should have been in bed! Instead, he peered into Mr. Crownley's room, watching the suspect's every move.

"Aha! He's up to something, all right!" Cookie thought triumphantly. "If not, what's he doin' that for?" Indeed, Mr. Crownley appeared to be transferring large wads of money into a briefcase, in a rather hasty and secretive way. Then, locking the briefcase, Mr. Crownley was seen to leave the room!

"This is it!" Cookie murmured, slipping into the shadows behind his suspect. Keeping well behind Mr. Crownley, Cookie followed him through the darkened streets. "I guess I'd better jump him an' overpower him!" he decided, gathering his courage to attack.

As he sprang forward, however, two men leaped from a doorway, landing on Mr. Crownley at the same moment as Cookie. There were lots of fists flying and punches landing and feet shooting out in sharp, businesslike kicks. When things quieted down a bit, Cookie realized that the two strangers were unconscious on the sidewalk and Mr. Crownley was pumping his hand and calling him "brave lad"!

It was all explained at the Police Station, where the two attackers were conveyed at once. "I was on my way to close a deal with Witherspoon," Crownley said, "when those two hooligans attacked me! Had it not been for this young hero, I'd have been robbed of a goodly sum!"

Mr. Witherspoon apologized to Cookie and called him "brave lad", too. You've saved a big business deal for me, my boy," he smiled. "If I were your father, I'd be proud of you!"

Mr. O'Toole was proud of Cookie, but proudest of all was Angelpuss, who put her arms around Cookie's neck, kissed him softly on the cheek and whispered, "I always knew you were wonderful, even when you were being sorta dumb!"

Which sounded rather like a left-handed compliment, but Cookie didn't mind! He didn't mind at all!
